IN THE HEART OF PARIS'S GRANDS BOULEVARDS

Since 1850, this stately building has existed as a hotel in the heart of the Grands Boulevards district, which used to mark the boundary between central Paris and the faubourgs. Even then, the neighborhood was associated with entertainment, amusement and leisurely strolls and it has preserved its vibrant and lively urban identity with its many theaters, cabarets, concert halls, brasseries and passageways for which Paris is so loved. Now you can enjoy the district's effervescence and retire to tranquility at the all-new Hôtel l'Échiquier on the calm residential street of the same name.

BLENDING ART NOUVEAU AND A MODERN SPIRIT

In this archetypal Parisian building, decorator Yann Le Coedic and interior architect Alessandro Scotti have paid homage to the Art Deco movement, while preserving the hotel's Belle Époque heritage, as can be seen in the elevator and stained glass of the marble stairway. Guests are enveloped in a lush and intimate atmosphere, quintessential of 1930's Parisian apartments. Each room is a poetic alcove, adorned with a contemporary chandelier, ceiling moldings, faceted mirror corner unit inspired by the drawings of Mallet-Stevens and a travel desk fashioned as a workspace - elegant decor that marries Art Nouveau and a modern spirit with originality.

IN THE BAR LOUNGE, TIMELESS SERENITY

The central feature of the hotel is an impressive glass roof identical to those of the passageways of the district. The stunning space beneath it houses a magnificent central bar, in mosaic, revealing a host of attractive features and unexpected surprises: dancing lights on the mirrors, decorative friezes, inviting alcoves... The playful blending of antique and contemporary furnishings, several of which are in rattan, pays homage to the winter gardens of the early 1900s. Linger in the bar's plush ambiance and savor the inspired creations of the skilled bartender of this elegant and inimitable Parisian rendezvous.
